

Mrs. H. H. Foss Wedded Here to Mr. W. H. Yarrow

Coronation, Followed by Reception, Takes Place at Home of Mr. and Mrs. H. Fairfield Osborn Jr.

Miss Perry Bride To-day

Mrs. Pierce H. Butler and Mr. G. H. Dempsey To Be Married on January 25

Mrs. Marian Hill Foss, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Hill, of Sackville, East Greenwich, England, was married yesterday to Mr. William H. Yarrow, son of Mr. George R. Yarrow, of Philadelphia, at the home of Mr. and Mrs. H. Fairfield Osborn Jr., 40 East 65th street. The ceremony was performed by the Rev. Dr. Ralph W. Solomon, and was followed by a reception at the Osborn home.

Mr. Yarrow, who is an artist, served during the war as a lieutenant in the 388th Central Postal Directory, and organized the camouflage school at Camp Jackson. Only members of the two families attended the wedding.

Miss Helen Gray Perry, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James A. Perry, and Lieutenant Russell Vernon Pollard will be married to-day in St. Thomas's Church. The ceremony will be performed by the Rev. Ernest M. Stires.

Dempsey-Butler Wedding
Mrs. Pierce H. Butler and Mr. Gerald H. Dempsey will be married on January 25 in this city. The place has not yet been decided upon. The engagement was announced last summer. Mrs. Butler was Miss Maude L. O'Brien, the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. B. O'Brien, and a sister of Mrs. J. B. O'Brien, who married Miss Catherine Mackay, daughter of Mr. J. B. Mackay, last September in Italy. Mr. Dempsey is a son of Mr. and Mrs. George C. Dempsey, of 133 Commonwealth Avenue, Boston.

The wedding will be small and quiet, with only relatives and a few intimate friends in attendance.

Invitations have been issued for the wedding of Miss Donna Esch, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Montgomery Esch, who will be married on Thursday, December 28, at the home of her parents, at 247 Fifth Avenue, to Mr. Charles Andrade Jr. The ceremony will be followed by a reception at the home of the bride's parents.

Young Boswell Interviews Chaliapin

BECAUSE he had not been a very great singer he would have been a very great actor.

His life reads like a tale of adventure. He has been a novice in a Russian monastery, a longshoreman on the Volga, a shoemaker and a wandering minstrel.

of his brilliant performance of "Boris Godunov" at the Metropolitan, he is touring America.

CHALIAPIN, more than six feet tall, dark, vigorous, dressed in a black velvet coat, with a velvet collar, and a fur hat, descended from a taxi with his secretary. A friend from Russia stepped forward and greeted him, and in their company Young Boswell, a little confused as to who should get out of the elevator first, went to CHALIAPIN's room, in an up-town hotel.

The Secretary—There is an interesting story in that coat.

So, with the aid of French and interpretation from the Russian, Young Boswell listened to the story. As he sat talking in a deep chair, CHALIAPIN turned to and from to the piano, on which he would strike a chord, as if to relieve his excess energy, and then go on.

CHALIAPIN—The coat I had on came from the Governor of — I said to the Bolshevik Governor that I wanted a fur coat, and that was it. But last year I ordered a fur coat from a very reliable fur here in America. I won't disclose the name. I was surprised because they asked me for a deposit. Of course, in Europe they would have known my name in America. I think that I looked suspicious, but I paid the $100 down, and they took my measure. I told them just how I wanted it, and that I would like it unusually large. I waited for two weeks and then went back for my coat. And it was like this.

He drew the coat he was wearing together until it looked as if it would burst.

CHALIAPIN—"It is too small," I said. "Oh, no," the manager told me. "It is a perfect fit." "For you," I said, "but not for me." He had just left out several skins along the sides, and then he tried to make me believe it was too large for me. I complained, but it was no use. I asked the manager how he dared to take the money, and he said, "Business is business."

The words had evidently made an impression on CHALIAPIN, for he quoted them in English.

CHALIAPIN—I told one of my friends that evening, "We cannot have dinner to-night. I have just been robbed by a fur coat." So I asked the Bolshevik Governor of — and he gave me a very good fur coat without a deposit.

Life doesn't need a fur coat, does it? Life doesn't walk enough to need one. Once some of my friends, who were walking, chided me for riding in a fur coat. They said, "He must be so rich to ride like that." I reminded them of the many times I went about in a coat of sack cloth, wearing rubber gaiters, without any shoes, and bad gaiters.

The Russian Friend—Well, there's every reason why you should be riding on rubber tires, now.

CHALIAPIN—It seemed restless, and wandered into another room.

Business Halts For Wanamaker Funeral To-day

Body Lies in State This Morning at Philadelphia; Nation's Notables Among 150 Honorary Pallbearers

PHILADELPHIA, Dec. 13.—The burial of John Wanamaker to-morrow in the Episcopal Church Cemetery of St. James the Less, Falls of Schuylkill, will be observed by a reverent suspension of business activities throughout the city. From 9 o'clock to-morrow morning until noon the body of the merchant prince will lie in state in the Presbyterian Church, Twenty-second and Bainbridge streets, a house of worship founded by him and on which his heart centered.

Funeral services will begin promptly at 2 o'clock. Thousands will be unable to enter, as it is expected the funeral will bring together many who have reason to feel they have been deprived of a real friend.

To Rest in Marble Vault

The body will be placed in a white marble vault to the right of the entrance gateway to the cemetery. To the left of it is the duplicate marble vault in which rests the body of Mrs. Wanamaker, who died in 1920. Before the funeral the vault there will be a brief service, and the Rev. Edward Ritchie, rector of St. James the Less, will speak on the life of John Wanamaker and his Christian character.

The services at St. James the Less will be conducted by the Rev. Dr. A. Gordon MacLennan, pastor, and many prominent divines of all denominations will be present.

The terms of the late merchant's will, which he refused to take to-day, they would not give a hint as to when the body would be placed in the vault, but it is thought the formalities will be observed within a few days.

All that is definitely known as to his fortune is that he carried insurance policies aggregating more than $3,000,000.

"Always at Work on Time"

Among the host of tributes to the memory of Mr. Wanamaker, which continued to pour into this city to-day from all sections of the country, this one stands out as unique.

"He was always at work on time." With these seven words Mr. Wanamaker's first office boy, George W. Stull, summarized the secret of the merchant's success.

The one-time office boy, who swept out, ran errands, delivered parcels and gradually learned to do more important routine work for his employer, now is superintendent of the store.
